

Harry's Take

March 4, 2025

Economy Suddenly Weakens: Recession Coming Soon?

I've been seeing the economy as the most stretched in history after the longest $27T U.S. stimulus program, by far. Nothing like it ever. And such stimulus is meant to be a temporary tool when the economy needs to get over a short-term crisis... not a 16-year, now permanent program. I've been expecting a deep recession or short depression, but there has been little sign of that in this "economy and markets on crack," until now.

What happened here? It's simple to me. The largest generation in history peaked in their collective Spending Wave in late 2007, as I forecasted would happen all the way back to the mid-1980s with the simplest leading indicator in history: a 46-year lag on the immigration-adjusted birth index for predictable peak spending. I've been preaching this for 30 years in several best-selling books and in speeches around the world. You would think the major economists would notice, but only Dr. Lacy Hunt in Austin, Texas did. How blind and closed to innovation can you be?

The problem now is just when the Millennial generation is finally moving us up again with their Spending Wave from 2024 into 2037, plateauing long-term into 2054... The economy is over-stretched, and loaded with debts and an unsustainable financial asset bubble that was never allowed to deleverage...

And now it's finally showing signs of cracking without ever-escalating stimulus for the first time in recent years.

Fed Atlanta GDP Model Plunges Suddenly to -2.8%, Similar to 5/2022

Source: <https://www.atlantafed.org/>

www.hsdent.com

Now it's going to look bi-polar for the Fed to reverse dramatically again to easing after tightening dramatically in reaction to their original over-easing in reaction to COVID. Hence, as I've been also forecasting, they will tend to be a little late in reacting.

It's going to be very interesting to see what happens here as we've never seen a scenario like this before, not even close! But my view is simple:

A soft landing is not possible as they never follow bubbles, and this bubble is the most artificial and longest in history.

So, continue to be defensive and in gold and/or 10- to 30-year Treasury bonds, or GLD and TLT in ETFs. Best to lean more towards the gold here and transition towards the T bonds after the first 50% or so crash in the Nasdaq, likely now into 2025.

I'll keep you updated.

Harry

Got a question or comment? You can reach us at info@hsdent.com.

Disclaimer: Copyright 2020 HS Dent Publishing LLC. These e-letters (the "E-letters") are created and authored by Harry Dent (the "Content Creator") and are published and provided for informational purposes only. The information in the E-letters constitutes the Content Creator's opinions. None of the information contained in the E-letters constitutes a recommendation that any particular security, portfolio of securities, transaction, or investment strategy is suitable for any specific person. The Content Creator is not advising and will not advise you personally concerning the nature, potential, value or suitability of any particular security, portfolio of securities, transaction, investment strategy or other matter. To the extent that any of the information contained in the E-letters may be deemed to be investment advice, such information is impersonal and not tailored to the investment needs of any specific person. From time to time, the Content Creators or their affiliates may hold positions or other interests in securities mentioned in the Newsletters and may trade for their own accounts on the information presented. The material in these Newsletters may not be reproduced, copied, or distributed without the express written permission of HS Dent Publishing, LLC.