Dow 50,000: Top of Our Lifetimes?

The Dow finally broke just above 50,000 into February 10 and has retreated 3% since. That's a very notable number to top around! A break convincingly below 48,775 will further confirm this as a top of importance. I think this is likely to be that "Top of Our Lifetimes" I have been waiting for. Our kids may not see higher than this for decades, as after the 1929 and 1968 generational tops previous that took 24 years+ to get back to those major highs.

More in the March issue on Monday March 2 where I look at the progression of 10 major global indices between October 6 and now, with the formal top around the most important S&P 500 on February 2 at 6,991.

The final last chance to sell stocks and risk assets including real estate. I'll keep you updated.
